Life as Bill see's it....

One day I was around my old mates Ron place, having a cool one on his vevrandah. His wife at the time, I think he was on his 3rd at that time and a pommy, She was on the phone having a yarn to her friend in England. Her friend must have asked "how she was getting on in Oz" She had only been here a short time. She said "the time difference is taking time to get used to, when I go to bed I am hungry, but when I go to dinner I feel sexy"

Just a Thought: Life is not a fairytale..... If you lose your shoe at midnight..... You're Drunk.

As you are probably aware, your kids at a young age will always try one on, you know that age. Anyway when our daughter was about eight, I picked her up from school one afternoon and she said "Daddy, I don't have to go to school anymore" "Why's that?" I asked. "Because" She said "My teacher told me today that I am a little Miss know it all."

Just a thought: A "NO" with the deepest conviction is better than a "YES" merely said to avoid trouble.

My brother told me the story on why he divorced his first wife. He said he was sitting in his lounge room watching tv sucking on a stubbie and eating chips, when she walked in and said "Have you seen $20

Crumpled up?" "No" he said. She unbuttoned the top three buttons, reached into her bra and pulled out a crumpled $20 note. She then asked "Have you seen a $50 all crumpled up?" "No I haven't" He said Now taking notice she seductively unzipped her slacks and from her knickers pulled out a $50 note. "now" She said "Have seen $50000 all crumpled up?" "No way" he said. Now really paying attention to which she said "go and look at the BMW in the garage"

PROMISING lethality and survivability, Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull announced the Rheinmetall Boxer 8x8 Combat Reconnaissance Vehicle (CRV) as the winner of the bid for the Land 400 Phase 2 project on March 14. CA Lt-Gen Angus Campbell said he was looking forward to soldiers seeing the first of the 211-strong fleet of Boxer CRVs ready for training in 2020. "It is an outstanding addition to Army capability, and a quantum leap forward in our capacity to prosecute the mission given to us by our government, and to take care of our people in doing so," Lt-Gen Campbell said. The Boxer CRV will replace the Australian Light Armoured Vehicle and operate in a range of environments, from regional stability missions through to high threat operations against adversaries. Rheinmetall Defence representative Ben Hudson said among the features of the vehicle was the high-tech turret, with a high level of automation. "The turret features a range of effects that allow the crew to use different systems to engage threats in a scaleable and measured way, from non-lethal effects to the missile system that can engage the most aggressive threats on the battlefield," he said. "The Boxer CRV is a veritable Swiss army knife that allows our soldiers to deal with the ambiguity of modern peacekeeping and future war-fighting scenarios." Defence Minister Marise Payne said the vehicle, and its competitor from BAE Systems, were rigorously tested before the selection was made. "We've put them in the heat, we've put them in the cold, we put them in the wet, we put them in the dry, we shot at them, we tried to blow them up," Senator Payne said. "The outcome of that assessment is that this is the capability to provide the mobility, the lethality and the protection that will support the men and women of the ADF in doing the job that we ask them to do every day." The Government also congratulated BAE Systems Australia for the quality of its tender and its commitment to Australian industry.

TWO MRH-90 Taipan crews safely delivered supplies to a group of school children and adults on March 9 following major flooding in North Queensland. The Army's support was requested after roads around the Echo Creek Adventure Camp in the Tully Valley were cut off, resulting in about 85 people being unable to leave the area. CO 5 Avn Regt Lt-Col Kim Gilfillan said multiple civilian attempts to reach the camp yesterday had been unsuccessful, leading to the Army being asked to respond. "We were aware of the situation so we were prepared to launch when the request came through," he said. "The weather was terrible but there was a small window that allowed the crews to get through and deliver supplies, and then extract a child with health concerns." The helicopter crews returned to Townsville safely on Friday night. Lt-Col Gilfillan said he was happy to get the confirmation the stranded adults and children are all doing well. "We're proud to be able to support our local community in which so many of our soldiers and their families are deeply part of," he said. "The MRH-90 Taipan is an extremely capable helicopter and was the key to the success of this mission. We are always ready to provide support to the community whenever an emergency situation such as this arises."

THE delivery of 24 new boats to 2RAR will allow the unit to qualify a new generation of soldiers in the skills required to meet the task at hand. The unit now has a new challenge – to find the best conditions to test the boats and the soldiers. Pte Ryan Van Mooren comes from a family of boating enthusiasts, which makes him the perfect fit for 2RAR. Since arriving at the unit in 2015, he has combined his traditional infantry experiences with his history of boating in his new role as a small craft operator. "The skills I've learned since I joined the Army have definitely made me a better soldier for my new role," he said. "I love the job, but I don't see myself as any different to soldiers in the other battalions – I've just had different experiences. "We don't fight any differently to other soldiers – we just get to the fight over water." Movement from ships to the beach will always be challenging, but the soldiers undergoing training say they will be well prepared to overcome any obstacles. Small Boats PI Comd Lt Tom O'Farrell has been part of the unit since 2016. Although 2RAR's change to an amphibious unit was made official last year, he said the unit's transition commenced more than five years ago. "Despite the opportunities that come with the arrival of new boats, it also creates some challenges as we search for difficult operating conditions to test our soldiers," he said. "The craft we operate is highly responsive and versatile, which makes our job much easier, and allows us greater opportunities for the unit and a great capability for Army." The pre-landing force is designed to get soldiers on the ground quickly to act as the eyes and ears for the commander of an amphibious mission. CO 2RAR Lt-Col Douglas Pashley said with the changes, 2RAR would be optimised for conducting pre-landing force operations, but would retain the ability to function as a standard infantry battalion. "With the arrival of the new small boat fleet, 2RAR is now well-equipped to meet the requirements of Defence," he said. "Although we have increased our focus on amphibious operations, they have made the unit better at working as a standard infantry battalion. "Our strong culture of professionalism and performance at any task will not change."

MAJ Victorio Guevara was honoured to lead the Army contingent in the Sydney Mardi Gras Parade on March 3. "I was proud to lead Army, support my mates and to show that Defence is diverse and inclusive," Maj Guevara said. This year was the 40th anniversary of the parade and the theme was 40 Years of Evolution. The focus was on re-creating crowd-favourite groups, such as the iconic Lemonettes. The event also paid homage to the parade's lesbian history. Up to 160 military and civilian members, along with family and friends, were part of the fifth Defence contingent to march in uniform in the parade, showing their acceptance, inclusion and respect for LGBTI members. Over the past few years the ADF has made significant efforts to improve its culture, focusing on attracting and retaining the best people regardless of their gender, race, religion or sexual orientation.

COPE North Exercise Directors from Australia, US and Japanese air forces visited community leaders from the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands to show their appreciation. The exercise directors were greeted by leaders from Rota, Tinian and Saipan Islands before attending a meeting with locals. Air Force Exercise Director GPCAPT Ben Sleeman told community leaders Cope North was “a very valuable training opportunity for us, as a fellow Pacific nation”. “We are very excited to be here on your beautiful island, training with our coalition partners. “This is a unique opportunity to train in this environment – it can happen anywhere, so if a disaster were to strike in the region, we are prepared. “I certainly appreciate your hospitality and the service of your staff and on behalf of Australia we thank you for your hospitality.” As the main hub for the Humanitarian Aid and Disaster Relief (HADR) component of the exercise, Rota’s airfield was used by Air Force, United States Air Force and Japanese Air Self Defense Force aircraft to effectively access the Contingency Response Squadron located beside the airfield. “Community engagement is a very important part of Cope North as we were employing our forces onto civilian airfields in an island nation,” GPCAPT Sleeman said. “To be able to show the community how we can assist them throughout these HADR scenarios enables us to build trust, as well as form a relationship to share their facilities in these situations.”

WOMEN from across the ADF are being encouraged to march together to change perceptions of what a veteran looks like as part of the By the Left initiative. The Women’s Veterans Network Australia (WVNA) created the initiative in response to the false assumptions and misunderstanding that female veterans face. Veteran and WVNA representative Kellie Dadds said many female veterans no longer wore their medals or marched on Anzac Day. “At some point they have either been questioned about whose medals they were wearing or were asked to move them to the right-hand side,” she said. “However, it must be emphasised that female veterans do not want to be viewed differently. “They want to be viewed the same – as veterans. But to achieve this, they must first be seen. “For one year only, female veterans are being invited to march together to welcome back and support their mates who have been impacted by this misunderstanding. “Initiatives like this, that are supported by current serving members, are so important.” Members are encouraged to march with a group they feel best reflects their service. IT IS an incredible honour to do Last Post readings and our personnel should consider giving it a try, according to LACW Laura Pearson. LACW Pearson, an air intelligence analyst with No. 460 Squadron, said taking part in the ceremony “is a great chance to learn about a veteran who had given his life in the pursuit of our freedom and also let others know of his or her courage and sacrifice”. She encouraged other members to volunteer as readers. “It is important to remember those who came before us and established the customs and traditions we hold in high regard,” she said. “Not only is it showing your respect to the diggers who gave their lives in the pursuit of freedom, it highlights how strong their influence still is today – the way we serve reflects our history and we should always strive to honour our past,” she said. “Being able to bring to light the individual stories of the men and women who forged the way forward for current serving members of the ADF is an incredible honour. “It accentuates the extreme lengths they went to in order to guarantee our freedom and their stories should never be forgotten – lest we forget.” LACW Pearson read the story of PTE William Marshall Aitken, 2/1st Pioneer Battalion, at the Australian War Memorial on December 28. PTE Aitken, who died of wounds on July 3, 1945, at Balikpapan, Borneo, aged 26, was part of a small team bringing two vehicles ashore on a landing craft, when it was fired on by Japanese artillery. A shell detonated nearby and PTE Aitken was hit in the head and chest by shrapnel, and died shortly afterwards. LACW Pearson said before the reading, she was nervous because she wanted to do justice to the story of PTE Aitken and the ultimate cost of his service. “Once I was up at the podium, though, it was easy to remember it wasn’t about me at all, but about this incredible young man who had volunteered to serve his country and undertook acts of bravery at such a young age,” she said. “His story and the adverse conditions he faced gave me courage.” LACW Pearson met members of PTE Aitken’s family after her reading. She said they thanked her and mentioned there were some facts mentioned in the reading that they had not even known.

“It was nice to speak with all the family and find out a little about them,” she said.

“It stresses there are traits that don’t disappear over time and that are replicated today, such as courage, teamwork and professionalism.”

TORRENTIAL rain turned the ocean to mud as the Luke Harrop Memorial triathlon became a duathlon on the Gold Coast on February 25.

FLTLT Alexander Barbaro joined six other ADF personnel (five Army, one Navy) to compete in the event.

It was a qualifying event for Age Group ITU World Championships, so turnout was strong despite the conditions.

Competing in the event awards double points towards the championships in September, so the weather did not deter contestants from racing.

Army’s SGT David Walsh finishing 4th in his age category, and LTCOL Iain Addinell and MAJ Peter Howden each placing 12th in theirs, which puts them in good stead for the championships.

LCDR Alan Clark said: “Everything counts at this point, so it’ll be great to have the ADF represented so well on the world triathlon stage.” The ADF Triathlon team is open to expressions of interest from new and seasoned athletes within the ADF.

THE crew of HMAS Warramunga has intercepted two vessels in the Arabian Sea carrying about eight tonnes of hashish valued at about $400 million.

Warramunga has now seized 19.5 tonnes of hashish and 1.5 tonnes of heroin, valued at more than $1.43 billion, since deploying to the Middle East in November. Warramunga's Seahawk crew detected a vessel of interest during surveillance operations on March 3. A boarding party searched the vessel, uncovering 4.1 tonnes of illicit cargo. The Seahawk crew then detected a second vessel of interest and the subsequent boarding and search operation resulted in the seizure of an additional 3.9 tonnes of illegal narcotics. CO HMAS Warramunga CMDR Dugald Clelland said he had been continually impressed with the crew's determination and professionalism. "This has been a high-tempo deployment for Warramunga but we have been fortunate in seeing significant quantities of narcotics not reach their final destination as a result of the efforts of the crew and the CTF150 team," CMDR Clelland said.

"Preventing the movement of these narcotics not only potentially saves lives, it also deprives terrorists and other criminal organisations of $1.43 billion in revenue, which allows us to degrade the effectiveness of these organisations.

" Commander JTF633 RADM Jaimie Hatcher said the achievements of Warramunga and her crew reflected a longstanding legacy of success by Navy in the region. "This is the 66th rotation of a RAN vessel in the region since 1990 and the continual successes of Warramunga during her rotation builds upon the foundation of commitment our Navy has shown to the region for nearly three decades," RADM Hatcher said. The narcotics were transferred to Warramunga and disposed of at sea.

THE stories of three new recruits taking their first steps towards their dream jobs in the ADF can be seen on YouTube. Defence Personnel Minister Darren Chester made the announcement on March 15 as part of the ADF's Indigenous Development Program.

Mr Chester said the Navy and Army Indigenous Development Programs (NIDP and AIDP) were important initiatives which enabled new recruits to develop skills, knowledge and confidence to pursue an exciting career in the ADF. "These new recruits will be put through their paces having a unique experience into what a career in the ADF has to offer," Mr Chester said. "They will receive high quality training and education with their weekly routine including Technical and Further Education (TAFE) studies in literacy and numeracy, physical fitness, military training and cultural studies." Mr Chester said the program's primary focus was to encourage and support the young men and women to reach their potential. "These new recruits are a great example of the drive and ambition the ADF is looking for. They are also fantastic role models for their communities who make a significant contribution to our country's defence force capability," Mr Chester said. More than 270 Indigenous men and women had sharpened their skills and broadened their life experiences through the programs and Mr Chester said he hoped the video would encourage many more to take up the challenge of a career in the ADF. Graduates will obtain a minimum of a TAFE Certificate II in foundation skills. They will also have the option of continuing with ADF careers or returning to civilian life with new workplace skills. The ADF is committed to increasing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander employment as part of the wider Closing the Gap strategy. Isabelle, Malik and Samowa's story can be seen at <https://youtu.be/YDQmsSwcyG8>. For more information on the program go to defencejobs.gov.au/indigenous/overview

THE first ever national art prize offered exclusively to all current and former defence personnel was launched at the Australian War Memorial on March 14.

The $10,000 Napier Waller Art Prize, named after WWI artist Napier Waller, aims to promote the healing potential of art for servicemen and servicewomen and to raise a broader awareness of the military.

Waller, who was severely wounded while fighting at Bullecourt and later had his right arm amputated, trained himself to write and draw with his left hand. He went on to design the artwork in the War Memorial's Hall of Memory and once said: "an artist paints with his head, not his arm".

One of the Meals on Wheels volunteers took his young granddaughter on his run with him. She had never seen the various appliances of old age such as canes, walkers and wheelchairs, and kept asking somewhat embarrassing questions. When he found her staring at a set of false teeth soaking in a glass he braced himself for the inevitable embarrassing remark. However she merely turned and whispered, "Grandad, the Tooth Fairy will never believe this."
